[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Danville, Va., May 10.—Losing several opportunities to score here this afternoon, Danville lost the entire series with Petersburg, the game to-day ending 7 to 5, despite the fact that the locals drove Frost from the box in the sixth inning. Hannifan, who replaced him, kept the score down.

Danville made two runs in the first, when Anderson walked and scored on Schrader's two-lagger, and Schrader scored on Laughlin's hit to left center. Petersburg tied it up in the third, and Danville added another run in the fourth on two hits, a passed ball and an out at second.

In the sixth Bush scored on a single to deep left, and in the same inning Laughlin secured a triple and scored on a hit. Here Frost was driven from the box, and Hannifan replaced him, and there was no more scoring that inning.

Petersburg again scored in the ninth on a wild pitch. Danville made a hard try for the game in the same inning, when Horner walked, and Morgan hit to left, Alexander, who was put in to bat for Bryant, walked, and Horner scored on an out at second. Hoffman stole second, but the side was struck out second a moment later. The score:

HEMPHILL AT RALEIGH

Colonel R. E. Lee, Jr., Greeted by Great Audience at Greensboro.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Raleigh, N. C., May 10.—Major J. C. Hemphill, editor of The Richmond Times-Dispatch, delivered a splendid address here this afternoon in connection with the Memorial Day celebration, before a great throng of people assembled in the Confederate Cemetery. He paid high tribute to the valor and honor of the Confederate soldier, and eloquently portrayed the victory that has arisen out of the apparent defeat of the Confederate cause, the Supreme Court of the United States having affirmed the contention of Southerners for States' rights, the great principle really involved in the Civil War. The reunited country and the loyalty of the whole people to the fundamental principles of the republic came in for forcible treatment.

The program at the cemetery, which included the address and the decoration of the graves of the Confederate dead, was preceded by a dinner on the green of the Capitol Square earlier in the afternoon, and a parade to the cemetery that was participated in by the old soldiers, headed by the famous Confederate drum corps and the Agricultural and Mechanical College cadets and citizens in a long line of carriages. Memorial Day exercises were especially successful in every detail.

Colonel R. E. Lee, Jr., at Greensboro.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Greensboro, N. C., May 10.—Colonel Robert E. Lee, Jr., a grandson of the great chieftain of the Confederacy, made the Memorial Day address here to-day.

Colonel Lee, after paying an eloquent tribute to the soldiers and women of the Confederacy, declared that "slavery was the occasion, not the cause, of the war, and the calamity not the crime of the South." He pointed out the efforts of Southerners to retain a clause in the Declaration of Independence to prohibit slavery in the newly established State, and even to incorporate such a condition in the original Constitution of the United States.

The speech here to-day, from a historical and patriotic standpoint, is recognized as the finest ever heard on an occasion, and Colonel Lee was given an ovation at its conclusion. The exercises were elaborate and impressive. A special choir rendered war songs, while the Normal College women's orchestra made music. The Opera House would not accommodate half the people who desired to hear Colonel Lee.

After the exercises the soldiers' graves and the monument at Green Hill Cemetery were covered with flowers, and a sumptuous dinner was served at Smith's Memorial Building, nearly 400 being fed.

Nineteen members of Guilford Camp have died since last Memorial Day, and a majority of those attending the exercises, and a sumptuous dinner was served at Smith's Memorial Building, nearly 400 being fed.

The exercises, which were most impressive, were in charge of the Daughters of the Confederacy. Mrs. H. D. Blake, president, and Colonel Lee was presented to the audience in an appropriate address by Colonel James T. Morehead.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Several addresses were delivered, which were received with applause. J. C. Kittrell, orator of the day, portrayed pathetic scenes during the deadly conflict, while the women, with heroism, did all in their power to cheer the Southern soldiers, many of whom gave their lives to the lost cause.

At the conclusion of the exercises a beautiful repast was provided for the old Confederate veterans by the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Colonel M. J. O'Leary, of the First Infantry, Georgia National Guard, to-day upon his return for a two weeks' stay at San Antonio, Tex.

"There is no opportunity for field instruction of the regular soldiers at the maneuvers. The regiments simply march out and march back. If a soldier enters a field a complaint is made and some farmer wants damage."

Colonel O'Leary said the mobilization, while a failure as far as maneuvers go, has demonstrated the nation's "woeful unpreparedness for war."

He declared that in event of trouble the National guard would be the real backbone of the United States army.

In event of intervention in Mexico," declared Colonel O'Leary, "the National Guard must be called out to take its place in the United States Army, for intervention would mean that both Mexican Federals and insurgents would oppose the American army."
